Ljubljana

The Boat With No Sail

At the station, exhibit maker Mara opens a padded case. The little boat inside is missing its cloth sail. Her father drew a lighthouse on it and she wants to display it at their family reunion in Rijeka. A loose note from her aunt Iva says, “Bring the boat. I've taken care of the sail.” Greta turns the note over and finds a sketch of a riverside bookstall.

POSTCARD CLUE

Find the bookstall beside the river in Ljubljana.

GRETA'S NOTE

“Pip suspects the case would also hold a very fine lunch.”

Ljubljana Riverside

The Stitch Down The Middle

By Plečnik's riverside market colonnade on the Ljubljanica, the bookseller brings out Iva's postcard. It shows the old sail spread flat. A thick zigzag repair runs down the middle. "My father stitched it himself," Mara says, tracing the drawing. "He said a sail could be patched any way you liked if the boat was small enough." Greta sketches the seam in her notebook.

POSTCARD CLUE

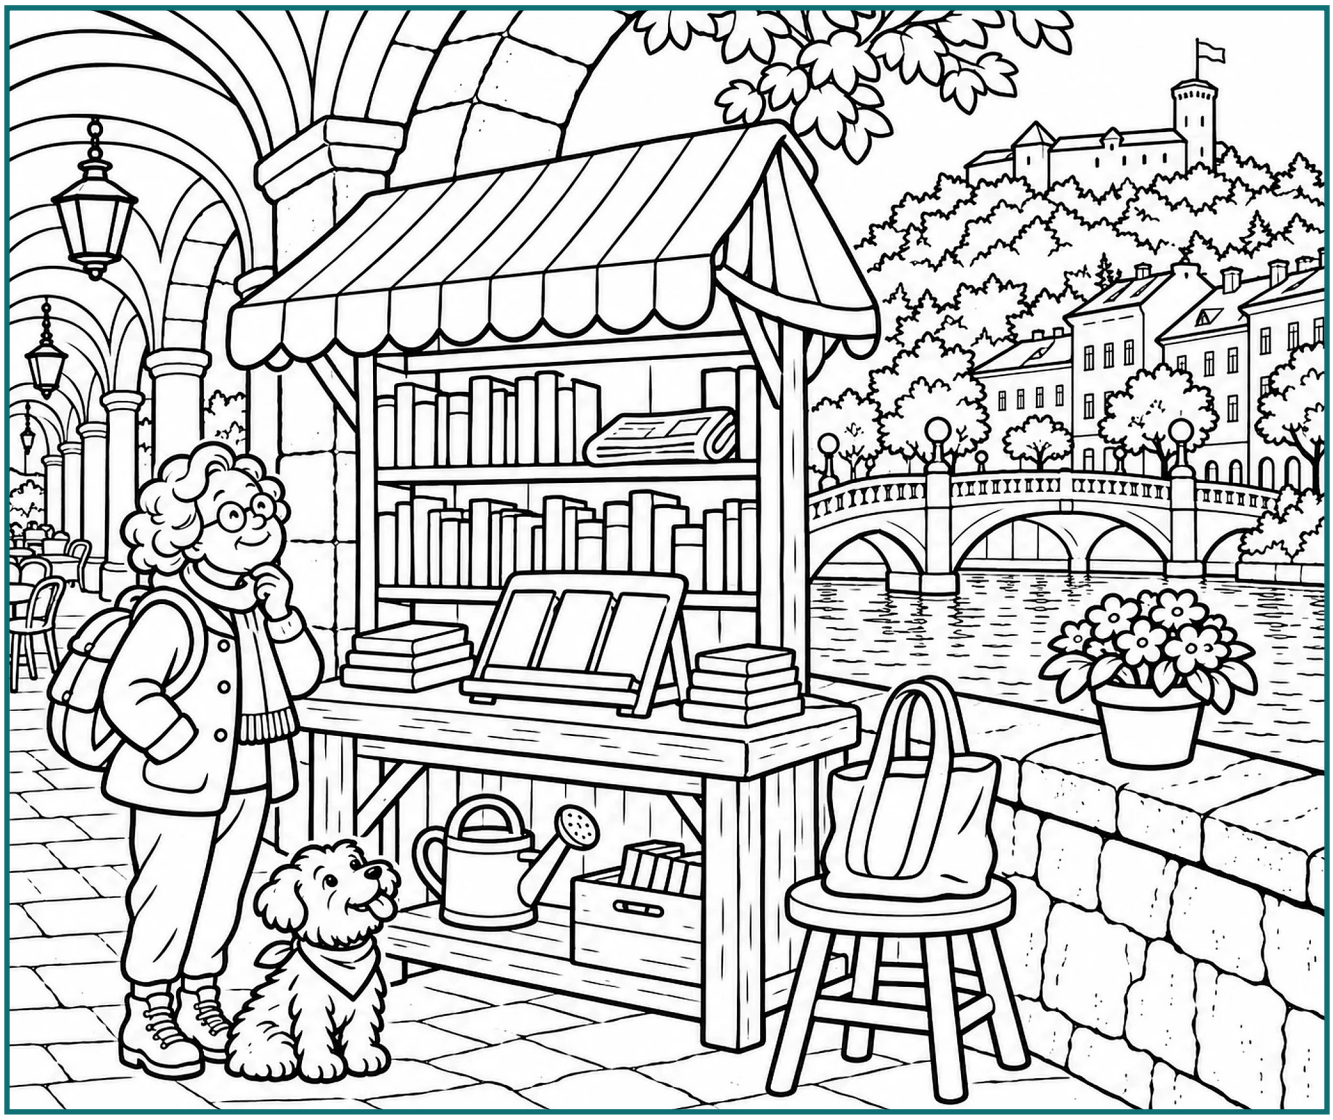

The back of the postcard shows a warm lantern in a stone arch at Postojna.

GRETA'S NOTE

"A zigzag is much easier to remember than a perfectly straight line."

Postojna

The Long Tube

After the train stops in Postojna, they head to the cave park above ground. At the entrance to a little visitors' room, Greta finds a postcard waiting beside the lantern. The drawing shows a long paper tube with a wide cloth tie. "Iva borrowed that tube from me," Mara says. "She could have rolled the sail inside it." Pip leans toward a draft at the doorway and watches one ear lift.

POSTCARD CLUE

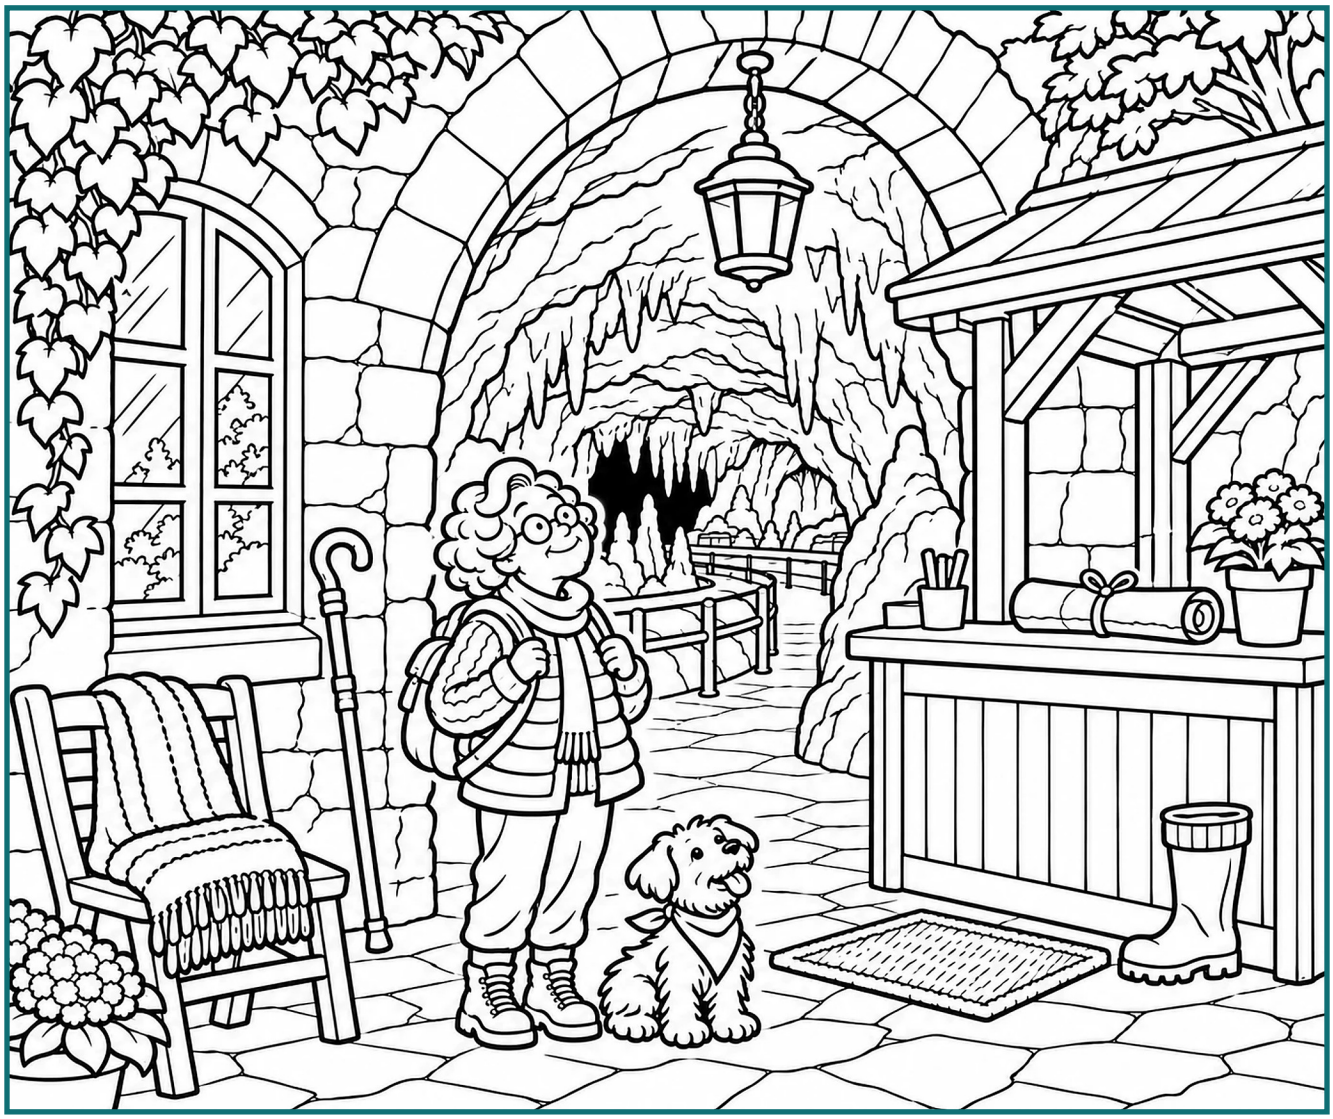

The postcard shows a workshop yard with an iron horseshoe in Divača. At Pivka they take the branch toward Divača for their coastal detour.

GRETA'S NOTE

"The wind has taken an interest in Pip's ears."
