St. Moritz

The Empty Cushion

Beside the platform at St. Moritz station, railway volunteer Emil lifts a glass dome. The cushion underneath is empty. Tonight he means to ring the little brass bell that once sat beside his mother's model train. Then he finds a postcard in the display tray. “My sister, Nora. That's her mountain sketch.” Greta takes out her notebook. Pip sits down beside the biscuit tin as if it were an exhibit.

POSTCARD CLUE

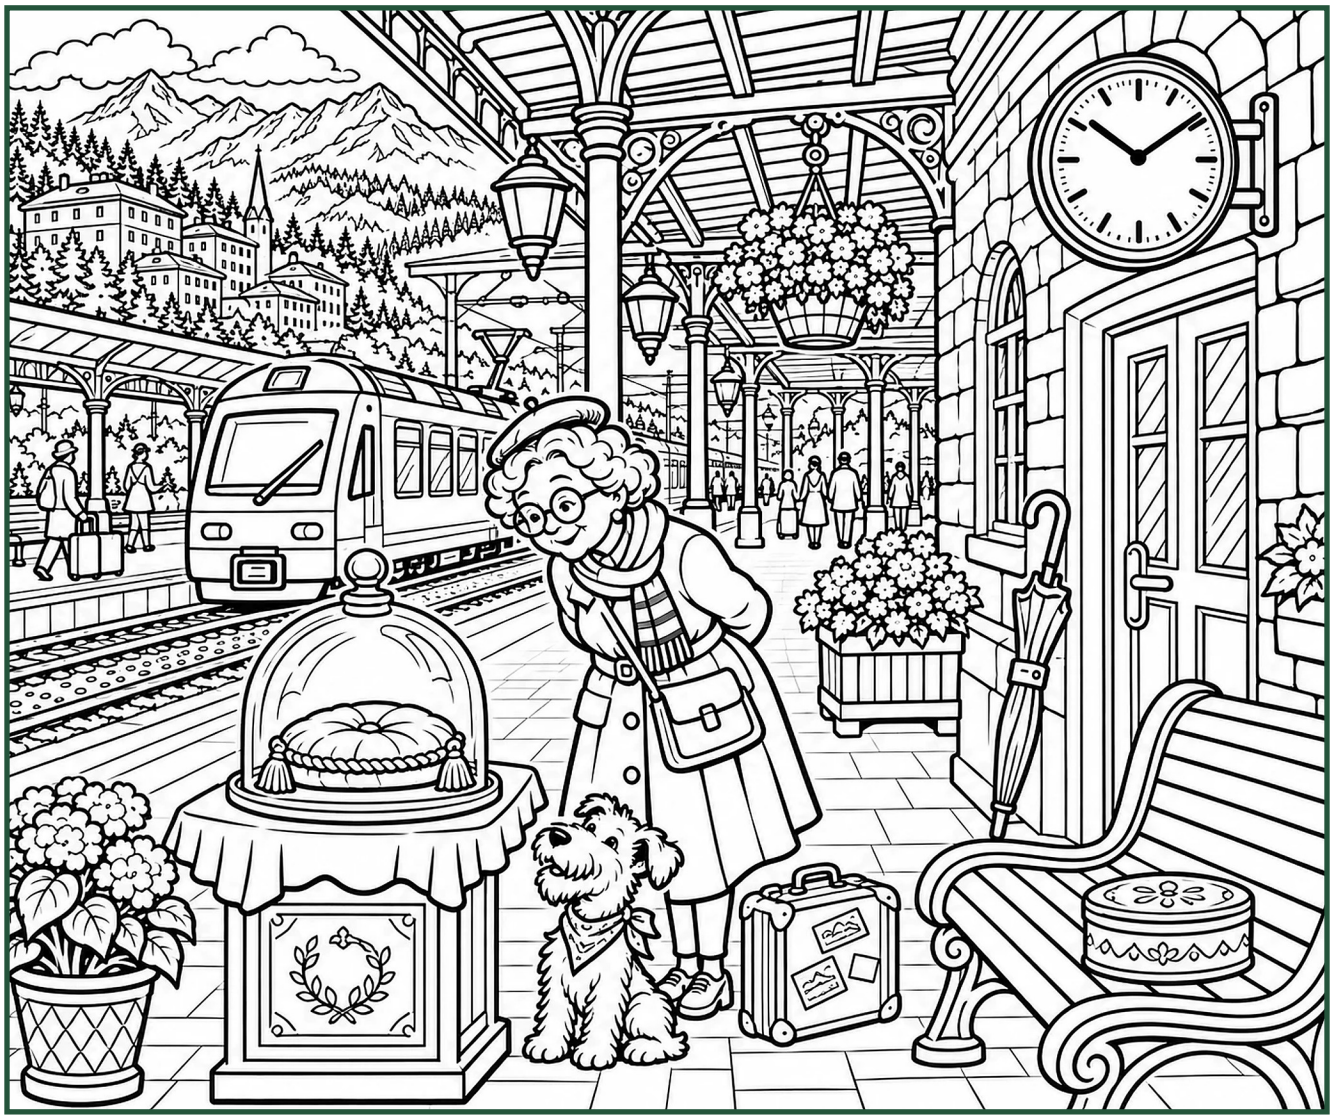

Nora drew a wooden window box outside the tea room at Pontresina.

GRETA'S NOTE

“A cushion can look quite grand with nothing on it.”
